

I think that FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. It is my understanding that the FCC's version would allow companies I do business with to contact me as an "existing customer" even though I have asked to not receive sales calls. Currently I have seen a 98% reduction in telemarketing calls of all types at my house. If you change and limit IN's law, then I will have to deal with all of the annoying phone calls again.
